China leads the recovery, economy expected to grow in 2020

During the month of June, the NAV of the AGCM Asia Growth Fund RC SEK share class increased by +5.7% and the WP EUR share class by +5.8%. Chinese equity markets defied the increased tensions between the US and China on a range of issues, and both Hong Kong and China's mainland A-share markets in Shanghai and Shenzhen gained during June, as investors became more sanguine on the reopening theme.

Some of the most noteworthy news from our fund holdings include Hong Kong based Asian insurance giant AIA Group's major step towards a full China expansion after it received regulatory approval to open a wholly owned Chinese subsidiary. Now AIA can seek licenses in all Chinese provinces and when obtained, AIA's addressable market will increase from today's 33% of China's economy to 100%. We will be following this development closely.

The US-listed Chinese e-commerce giant JD.com and gaming operator NetEase successfully concluded secondary listings in Hong Kong. These secondary listings are driven both by US and Chinese interests and tend to be very positive for valuations since Chinese investors have first-hand experience of these household names and have until now not been able to invest in them. The retail tranches of NetEase and JD.com in Hong Kong were oversubscribed by 361x and 179x respectively. The shares traded up significantly both before and after the secondary listings, contributing positively to the performance of the fund.

Telecom operator China Mobile reported it had signed up 56 million 5G subscribers by the end of May. The trend towards 5G is likely to lead to an acceleration in revenue growth for the Chinese telecom operators, as the average revenue per subscriber for 5G plans are higher than for their overall businesses. Capital expenditures have stayed elevated for the past 12 months and the operators are finally starting to get repaid on their 5G investments.

Our Singaporean bank holdings DBS and UOB are recovering from the lockdowns implemented in April to combat rising COVID-19 infection rates. The number of new infections in Singapore are now down to single digits per day. After the country entered phase 2 lockdowns in mid-June, shops and restaurants began to re-open and car traffic to recover. We expect the quality of the banks' loan books will improve in line with the recovery of the economy.

In June, IMF presented its latest forecast for the World economy, projecting a +1% full-year 2020 GDP growth rate for China, a stark difference to the US economy which IMF expects to contract by -8.0% and the Euro zone to contract by -10.2%. A leading Chinese investment bank which historically has been much better than the IMF at projecting Chinese economic growth, actually projects a 3% full-year 2020 GDP growth rate for China. It remains a mystery to us that Western investors in general have such high allocations to the expensive and vulnerable Western equity markets and so little in North Asia where growth is substantially higher and equity valuations a lot cheaper.

So as we progress into the second half of 2020, we believe investors will wake up to fact that the gap between the economic growth in China compared to developed markets will be huge in China's favor and that should favor international investor appetite for Chinese equities and help lift prices higher from the current low levels.
